Supporting Family After a Child Dies

November 2014

Volume XXVII, Number 9

Dear Compassionate Friends,

Recently I was involved in a rambling conversation with several people about pets. One of the men shared the sadness he felt as he held his cat of many years while it was euthanized. "I did not know I could feel so sad, he said. I know it is not the same as having a child die, but I think it was pretty close." I left. I guess it is not possible to imagine the life altering, agony of the loss of your child, a grief that impacts your life forever, if you haven't experienced it.

In our Marriage Encounter talks there is a section where we share how we might feel if our spouse were to die. I have often thought that we are naïve to think we have any clue as to the feelings we would experience at the death of our helpmate, friend, lover. The wife of long time Marriage Encounter friends died suddenly this week. In response to an email we sent, the husband responded, "This hurts much worse than I could have imagined." I am pretty sure we cannot imagine the long journey of grief he is beginning any more than those whose child has not died can truly know the relentless, mixture of feelings that surround us for years as we process our grief. Bereaved parents often express how difficult the holidays can be. Part of this is because the holidays usually center around family, and there is a huge hole in each of our families. But part of it is because well meaning friends and family members may have lots of advice for how we could or should be moving on. In their desire to say something, they say words that assault us and unwittingly cause us pain. It is a hard thing to do, but we must try to remember that they act from ignorance. If your child has not died you cannot begin to know how that feels and each bereaved parent is going to experience and process their grief in different ways. Try to extend a little extra grace to your family and friends this holiday season. And if you need to, leave.

Sincerely, Jerry and Carol Webb

CHALKBOARD REFLECTIONS

I miss you so much. I think of you every day. I know you are happy and free and it won't be long until we meet again. Until then, stay with me.

I need the strength of your beautiful spirit. I love you more than I could ever express in words, I'm doing my best at life but it's hard sometimes. I know you will be waiting for me, I love you -forever, Mom

In loving memory of our babies. We love and miss you. Please, angel, guard over our two loved ones.

I love and miss you very much! Happy Easter. I hope you got a new dress where you are. I think of you often; especially lately. I will always love you. No more tears until we meet again. Love, Mom

In remembering our children, in sharing with each other, in supporting each other, we ease our pain, we share each step, we help smooth the road, and we serve as witnesses to the fact that we can make it beyond grief as we support each other.

Roy Peterson,
Past National President TCF

Helpful Tip #5 for Getting Through the Holidays When You're Grieving or Lonely...

If you find that you are going to be by yourself on Thanksgiving and you don't want to be, then take action steps to help yourself. Seek out others that are alone and go out to a restaurant or have a potluck dinner. If you haven't had time to plan ahead, spur of the moment things can work out better than planned things sometimes. Perhaps you know of people who are shut-ins or are in a convalescent home who would love to have visitors. Help out a family you know that has someone at home that has special needs. The best way to not feel bad is to do something to help someone else. You help yourself in the process. You might find that you like doing these things so much you create a new tradition!

Love Gifts

Please support our TCF Chapter

As parents and other family members find healing and hope within the group or from the newsletter, they often wish to make a Love Gift to help with the work of our chapter. This is a meaningful way to remember a beloved child.

Love gifts are used to provide postage for the newsletter and mailings to newly bereaved families. Some of the love gifts are used for materials to share with first time attendees at our meetings or to purchase books for our library. Our thanks to the many families who provide love gifts so that the work of reaching out to bereaved parents and families can continue.

If you would like to send a love gift, please send it to our treasurers, Larry and Joyce Molitor, P.O. Box 191, Cordova, Illinois 61242. Checks can be made out to The Compassionate Friends. Your gifts are tax deductible.

The Angel of Hope Memorial Garden

“In the shadow of the snow-clad Wasatch range in Salt Lake City, a statue of a dove-winged angel stands watch over a cemetery. Though it rises above tombstones, it marks no burial. Though it claims no body, it itself is claimed by thousands. The angel's face is that of a child's. Its arms raised as a child to be lifted. On its wings are HOPE. ”

Here in the Quad Cities, in the Moline Memorial Cemetery, the Angel of Hope Memorial Garden takes form. Phase One has concluded and Phase Two has initiated. The angel winged-shaped planters rise from the earth flanking the two sides of the central circle. There in time to come, the Quad Cities' Angel of Hope will one day stand. In the area before the angel lie inscribed bricks that spell out the names of local children who have died before their time, remembered by parents, siblings, grandparents, and relatives who daily live with the absence of a loved child.

The memorial has areas with designated paving stones that are suitable for inscription. These stones are available to parents, siblings, and families who would like to remember a deceased child, adult-child, sibling, niece, nephew, or grandchild. The order form is found on page 9 or go to the TCF website, <http://www.quadcitiestcf.org> and download the order form.

Coping with Grief: Winter Blues

When the weather gets colder and the days get shorter, we often find ourselves feeling low. Some people call this the Winter Blues. When you are grieving, those blues can feel overwhelming. Grief itself is hard to cope with, and cold winds and longer nights can make those feelings seem more intense. Here are a few ideas that may help you cope with the Winter Blues:

- ♥ Winter only lasts a few months. Use this time to reflect on your relationship with the person who died. Sometimes in our efforts to deny our loss, we rob ourselves of precious memories.
- ♥ Reach out to friends or family when you can. Often our isolation is worse because we do not allow ourselves time with others. You are not alone. There are many other people going through a similar experience. Although your relationship with your loved one is special, other people can understand. Take the risk to ask someone over for coffee or tea. Share with them.

♥ Take time to look through picture albums. Gather family to share stories. Make a new tradition during the dreary months of winter for family to gather for an evening of remembering. The holidays are over, and the pressure is off. Maybe other people are feeling the same way and are afraid to talk about it.

♥ Try a grief support group. Sometimes all we need is to know other people hear us and understand. A group can help you to know you are normal.

♥ Read . . . favorite stories, comedies, novels, or information about grief to understand your own reactions better. Somehow reading about such topics helps us know we are not alone. You can look for grief materials in your local library, church, or local TCF chapter.

- ♥ Take good care of yourself. Eat right, rest, and pamper your body. This goes for any season. Your body is under a tremendous amount of stress in adjusting to your loss.
- ♥ Since grief affects us physically, paying attention to our bodies is important. Whether you prefer to do things alone or with others, physical activity helps. Taking a walk, doing simple aerobics, indoor swimming, playing racquetball or other activities can help you keep your body ready for the continued adjustment to loss. Feeling better physically can make a difference.

♥ If you feel sad and need to cry, know that is a normal reaction. You are not weak if you need to show your emotions.

♥ Write a letter to your loved one. Sometimes we need to communicate with them. Going to the cemetery is okay and normal. If the weather prevents that, a letter can be very helpful. Remember that you will survive this loss. The pain and ache can seem like it will last forever. The intensity will lessen in time, although you will always remember your loved one. Time does not necessarily “heal” all wounds, but it can help us adjust to the change. Take it minute by minute . . . then day by day.
